

THE HERALD

From the Pastor:

September 2017

The white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, was another reminder that racism continues in our nation. We are still dealing with the controversy of white police officers killing African Americans. Racial profiling by the police is a concern.

As Christians we believe there is one family of God, and we are all members of the one family. There is one race, the human race. God created a diverse people and God's diversity is to be celebrated. Hatred and racism are sins. There is no place for racism, hatred, or white supremacy.

Unfortunately, the church, at least part of the church, supported slavery, and participated in segregation. By 1815, Presbyterians declared slavery to be "inconsistent with the Gospel." The southern Presbyterian church separated in 1861 and became known as the Presbyterian Church in the United States (PCUS). The controversy over slavery was one factor causing the split. Some leaders in that denomination supported slavery and believed that for African Americans slavery was their lot in life. Like most of the institutions in the south, many churches participated in segregation and the Jim Crow laws following the end of the Civil War. Churches and presbyteries were segregated. In 1943 the PCUS declared that all commissioners to the General Assembly should be treated equally regardless of color. We need to remember that racism was not limited to the former confederate states. In 1983, over 120 years later, the "southern church" and the "northern church" were finally reunited and formed the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The church was involved in the Civil Rights movement. Many of the leaders of the movement were clergy, and many were Presbyterians. But, of course, not all Presbyterians supported the Civil Rights movement. In 1963, there was a statement written by eight white clergy leaders in Birmingham, Alabama, who were critical of Martin Luther King, Jr., and the Civil Rights movement. One of the signers was a Presbyterian minister in the PCUS who was the moderator of the Synod of Alabama. However, this minister quickly became supportive of integration which resulted in he and his family receiving death threats and his car's tires were slashed. He was accused of "communist treachery" by a committee within the church.

As you can see, the Presbyterian Church has quite a diverse history concerning slavery, segregation, and the Civil Rights movement. We continue to struggle with racism and diversity. We are a predominantly white denomination. We need to work on becoming more diverse and we need to struggle with the issue of racism both within our church and within our nation.

The Presbyterian Church is in the midst of an ongoing campaign to address racial injustice, and is sharing antiracism resources to better equip the greater church to work against racism. You can find more information at: facing-racism.pcusa.org. The website reads, "Racism is the opposite of what God intends for humanity. It is the rejection of the other, which is entirely contrary to the Word of God incarnate in Jesus Christ. Racism is a lie about our fellow human beings, for it says that some are less than others. Because of our biblical understanding of who God is and what God intends for humanity, the PC(USA) must stand against, speak against, and work against racism."
